

Prof. Suzuki received the Award of RSC (Royal Society of Chemistry)
Analyst, the Japan Society for Analytical Chemistry

The 65th Conference of the Japan Society for Analytical Chemistry held at Hokkaido University gave Prof. Suzuki the Award of RSC (Royal Society of Chemistry) Analyst for his poster presentation on September 15. More than 1200 participants gathered and 800 presentations were conducted at the conference. He presented “Development of small and rapid one-chip biosensor IC with CMOS oscillator array working at 120/60 GHz” researched with Sharp Corporation collaboratively and was selected out of younger researchers’ 218 presentation. Congratulations! We wish our members follow him and make good presentations with higher presentation skills and with good researches based on deep discussions.
